

In Re: Parental Rights As To D.D., S.D. and J.D., No. 69068, Order of Reversal and Remand (Unpublished Disposition, July 28, 2016)
SC UNPUB

In accordance with NRS 128.105, to terminate parental rights, the district court must find clear and convincing evidence that (1) at least one ground of parental fault exists, and (2) termination is in the child's best interest.

Here, substantial evidence did not support the district court's findings regarding the following: a presumption of abandonment on the part of the appellant pursuant to NRS 128.012(2); that the children were neglected at the time of trial; and that the children were at a serious risk of injury if returned to appellant's care pursuant to NRS 128.105(2)(e).

Therefore, none of the district court's parental fault findings were supported by substantial evidence and the district court erred by terminating appellant's parental rights.